Unbecoming: Michaels, Eric: Amazon.com.au: Books

Eric was one of the first known residents of Central Australia to die with AIDS. And, in typical style, he did that in a very public and assertive fashion by documenting the last months of his life in a diary that was to be published after he had gone. Unbecoming is a remarkable volume. It is a confronting, 'warts and all' account of what seems like everything he did and said and thought as the virus took its final toll.

Queers of the Desert: Eric Michaels

In the foreword of Eric's diary, Paul Foss summarised his career in these terms: "After finishing his doctorate, Eric accepted a fellowship from the Australian Institute of Aboriginal Studies in Canberra to research the impact of television on remote Aboriginal communities - eventually published as The Aboriginal Invention of Television, 1982-86 (Canberra, AIAS, 1986).
